HOW TO USE THIS CODE

Overview and contents

Our workforce may perform its duties at DCI offices, remotely or at a client location. This Code sets a consistent minimum standard of conduct across all these settings.

TWO ORGANISATIONS, ONE PROFESSIONAL STANDARD

DCI remains responsible for its employer obligations. The client may direct the assigned work and establish site-specific rules. Employees must follow lawful, authorised requirements of both, and promptly ask DCI for help if any instructions conflict.

Who should read this?

- Every employee of DCI, including assigned/outsourced staff, contract employees, recruitment staff, finance staff, managers and directors.
- Any subcontractor or business partner instructed by DCI to apply equivalent conduct standards, subject to contractual terms.

IMPORTANT

This Code supplements, but does not replace, employment contracts, applicable legislation, client security instructions, worksite procedures or DCI policies. Any conflict must be reported for guidance before proceeding.

OUR COMMITMENT

A message to every DCI colleague

At DCI Consultants, our success depends on the confidence that clients place in our people. A client may welcome a DCI employee into its office, systems and operations for months or years. That trust must be earned each day through professional conduct and sound judgment.

Whether you manage recruitment, prepare payroll or work in a client engineering team, you represent DCI through your actions. We expect accuracy, respect, honesty, care for colleagues and strict protection of client information.

No assignment, deadline, commercial target or customer request justifies breaking the law, compromising safety, falsifying records or exposing confidential information. If something appears wrong, raise it early. DCI will consider concerns fairly and without retaliation against anyone who reports in good faith.

This document is intended to make those expectations clear, practical and consistent across different clients and work locations.

The values behind our decisions

INTEGRITY	Tell the truth, record facts correctly and reject improper benefit.
RESPECT	Treat colleagues, candidates, clients and visitors with dignity.
CARE	Put workplace safety, well-being and fairness first.
SECURITY	Safeguard client systems, personal data and company property.
SERVICE	Deliver dependable professional work and honour commitments.

OUR EVERYDAY TEST

Is it lawful? Is it safe? Would DCI and the client agree this is authorised? Are my records accurate? Would I be comfortable explaining my decision to my manager?

01 OUR COMMITMENT

Scope, accountability and making the right decision

1.1 Who the Code applies to

This Code applies in the course of DCI business to all DCI employees, including temporary and fixed-term employees working at clients. It applies while attending meetings, working remotely, visiting a client, communicating electronically or travelling for authorised work.

1.2 Our respective responsibilities

- DCI: communicates requirements, manages employment terms and HR matters, provides appropriate support, addresses reported issues and oversees compliance.
- Client: may establish site access, operations, safety, information-security and performance procedures for personnel assigned to its site.
- Every employee: understands and complies with the applicable rules, attends required training, seeks clarification and reports concerns without delay.
- Managers and recruiters: model good conduct, prevent retaliation, protect employee data, investigate or escalate concerns, and do not press staff to breach standards.

1.3 If rules or instructions conflict

1. Make safety the immediate priority; stop any dangerous activity and alert the on-site responsible person.
2. Do not override the law, security classification, permit conditions or DCI employment terms just because someone at the client asks.
3. Inform the DCI reporting manager or HR contact and seek a documented resolution. Where relevant, also notify the authorised client supervisor.

1.4 Non-compliance

Breaches may result in counselling, retraining, reassignment, disciplinary action up to dismissal, reporting to authorities or other lawful action, depending on the circumstances. No disciplinary outcome is automatic; due process and applicable requirements apply.

REMEMBER

A client supervisor may direct your day-to-day work but should not independently change your DCI salary, employment contract, work pass arrangements or other formal employment terms.

02 RESPECT & SAFE WORKPLACES

Everyone deserves dignity and protection

2.1 Fair treatment and anti-harassment

Employment-related decisions must be based on relevant skills, qualifications, performance, role requirements and lawful criteria. DCI does not tolerate bullying, intimidation, threatening conduct, sexual harassment, discriminatory remarks, unwanted sexual attention or retaliation for raising a concern.

- Communicate respectfully in person, by message and during online meetings; avoid offensive images, jokes and comments.
- Do not use seniority, work-allocation power or access to client opportunities to pressure another person into personal favours.
- Report inappropriate conduct, whether caused by a DCI colleague, client representative, vendor or member of the public.

2.2 Workplace health and safety

Employees must comply with relevant workplace safety and health requirements, risk assessments, emergency procedures, access restrictions, permits and prescribed protective equipment. Hazardous work must not proceed without necessary approval and competency.

- Report an injury, near miss, unsafe condition or security-related physical hazard promptly to the client contact and DCI, even if the incident appears minor.
- Seek immediate help for emergencies, follow site evacuation instructions and preserve incident details for reporting.
- Do not work while impaired by alcohol, illegal drugs or a condition that makes the task unsafe; inform the appropriate supervisor if you are unfit for duty.

CLIENT-SITE EXAMPLE

A DCI technician is asked to perform electrical work without the required permit or safety briefing. The technician must decline to start, secure the area if needed, and alert the client site lead and DCI.

2.3 Employment rights and welfare

DCI will administer salary, statutory contributions, leave, benefits, records and other employment arrangements in accordance with each employee's applicable contract and Singapore law. Specific entitlements can differ by employee category and legal coverage; this Code does not create additional contractual benefits.

- Employees should receive their key employment terms and applicable payslips and report incorrect salary, allowance, CPF or deductions to DCI promptly.
- Do not misstate hours, pressure colleagues to work off the clock, or conceal work injuries to preserve a client relationship.
- Leave, medical certification, overtime and shift changes must follow the applicable DCI and client approval workflow. Approvals affecting pay or contracts require DCI validation.

2.4 Workplace grievances and employee support

Concerns about duties, supervisor conduct, workload, allocation, accommodation (where relevant), bullying, discrimination or wage matters should be raised with DCI, even when the issue arises at a client site. Employees may also use appropriate client reporting arrangements without losing access to DCI.

2.5 Responsible supervision

Supervisors must not use threats of removal from assignment, adverse performance reviews or work-pass consequences to silence genuine concerns. They should communicate expectations clearly, keep records fairly and involve DCI in material employment decisions.

ONE USEFUL DISTINCTION

The client can assess the work performed on its project. DCI remains the point of contact for formal DCI employment decisions, payroll administration and contractual changes.

03 WORKING AT CLIENT SITES

Assignment rules and professional conduct

3.1 Before starting an assignment

- Confirm the assigned client, worksite, approved role, reporting lines, work arrangements and essential access requirements.
- Complete client induction, relevant background screening where lawful, confidentiality undertakings and safety/security training.
- Use only valid identification, passes, permits and access approvals assigned to you; do not allow others to use your credentials.

3.2 During the assignment

- Follow lawful client operational rules, dress codes, visitor policies, attendance procedures and security instructions applicable to the role.
- Keep DCI informed of changes in client supervisor, physical worksite, duties, hours, work arrangements and any incident affecting deployment.
- Do not accept material changes to job scope, transfer to another entity/site, contract extension or termination on behalf of DCI without DCI approval.
- Respect client employees as colleagues while maintaining the distinction between DCI employment and client supervision.

3.3 Using client premises and resources

Use facilities, laptops, networks, identification badges, data, licensed tools and equipment only for authorised work. Do not photograph secure areas, record meetings, copy proprietary material, install unapproved applications or transfer assets without permission.

3.4 End of assignment

Cooperate with authorised handover. Return passes, equipment, keys, credentials and confidential materials as instructed. DCI and the client must confirm applicable offboarding, access revocation and outstanding work records.

IF A CLIENT OFFERS YOU DIRECT EMPLOYMENT

Be transparent about the approach, observe your contractual obligations and inform DCI through the established HR channel. Do not negotiate changes to DCI billing or assignment records yourself.

03 WORK HOURS & SERVICE QUALITY

Attendance, reporting and representation

3.5 Timesheets and attendance records

All working hours, overtime, leave, remote-work arrangements and customer-approved expenses must be recorded truthfully, on time and in the authorised system. Entries must match the work actually performed and the approvals required by the relevant contract.

- Never submit hours not worked, duplicate entries, backdated false approvals or another person's attendance as your own.
- Do not work unapproved overtime with an expectation that it will be billed or paid; escalate conflicting directions to DCI.
- Promptly correct errors with an audit trail rather than concealing or quietly altering approved entries.

3.6 Performance and service delivery

Carry out tasks with competence, diligence and appropriate supervision. Escalate errors, missed milestones, material customer dissatisfaction or technical risks early. Do not promise service levels, pricing, extension terms or deliverables beyond your authority.

3.7 Communication and professional representation

Be clear whether you are speaking in your personal capacity, as an assigned DCI professional, or as an authorised client representative. Do not issue official client statements, approve payments, sign contracts or commit the client or DCI without delegated authority.

3.8 When an issue arises

4. Inform the appropriate client supervisor about immediate operational impact or safety risk.
5. Notify your DCI reporting manager/HR contact about incidents affecting employment, attendance, client satisfaction, safety or security.
6. Keep an objective factual record, and do not speculate, conceal details or share sensitive incident information beyond authorised persons.

ACCURATE TIME = TRUSTWORTHY BILLING

DCI customer invoicing and payroll decisions rely on accurate assignment, attendance and approval records. Any uncertainty should be resolved before submission.

04 PERSONAL DATA & CONFIDENTIALITY

Protect information entrusted to us

4.1 Candidate, employee and client information

DCI handles CVs, contact details, identity and immigration details, salary information, contracts, evaluations, medical documents where lawfully necessary and client project data. Such information must be collected and used only for authorised purposes and handled according to applicable data-protection requirements.

- Share CVs or staff records only with authorised individuals for legitimate recruitment, employment or client service purposes.
- Use approved storage, role-based access and secure transmission; verify recipients before sending sensitive information.
- Do not disclose one client's commercial terms, rates, staffing data or project information to another client.
- Retain or dispose of records only under approved business and legal retention rules; never destroy records subject to an investigation or hold.

4.2 Client confidential information

Client information may include financial data, plans, designs, source code, system architecture, classified or restricted material, credentials, procurement details and unpublished business information. Apply the client's classification and handling requirements, which may be stricter than DCI's general rules.

4.3 Information about colleagues and candidates

Do not gossip about salaries, personal circumstances, allegations, interview decisions or employment records. Access to HR or recruitment systems is not permission to browse records unrelated to one's duties.

PRACTICAL EXAMPLE

A recruiter must not send a candidate's full CV to an unrelated client without an authorised purpose and the necessary basis for sharing. A deployed engineer must not take project files home for future personal reference.

04 CYBER SECURITY & AI TOOLS

Protect access, devices and digital work

4.4 Passwords, devices and access

- Use unique personal accounts; protect passwords and multi-factor authentication; never share access cards, MFA codes or security tokens.
- Do not install unapproved software, plug unknown USB devices into client equipment, evade security controls or transmit work files to private email or cloud accounts.
- Lock unattended devices; use approved networks and transfer tools; immediately report lost devices, suspicious messages and potential data exposures.

4.5 Artificial intelligence and online platforms

Use generative AI, translation tools, automated transcription, external code assistants and online file-conversion services only where the relevant DCI and client policies expressly allow them. Do not upload client-restricted information, source code, personal data, contracts or confidential commercial figures to unapproved services.

Where approved tools are used, review outputs for accuracy, bias, confidentiality, licensing and operational safety. A generated answer never replaces an employee's responsibility for decisions or data security.

4.6 Security incidents

7 Stop the risky action if safe and preserve relevant details.

8 Report promptly to the client security/helpdesk channel for affected client systems and to DCI management or the designated security contact.

9 Do not investigate beyond your authority, delete evidence, reset or share access without instructions, or communicate publicly about the incident.

SIMPLE RULE

If client policies prohibit external AI or file sharing, do not use it—even if DCI permits similar tools for its internal work.

05 HONEST & ETHICAL BUSINESS

No corruption, fraud or misleading conduct

5.1 Zero tolerance for bribery and kickbacks

DCI prohibits offering, requesting, giving or accepting improper benefits intended to influence recruitment, contract award, procurement, candidate selection, work assignments, performance ratings, invoice certification or other decisions. This includes cash and non-cash favours, secret referral payments, facilitation payments or benefits routed through third parties.

- Never pay a client decision-maker to award a manpower contract, shortlist a candidate or approve a rate or invoice.
- Never ask a candidate or employee for an unauthorised personal payment in exchange for employment, placement, renewal or work-pass assistance.
- Do not use an agent or intermediary to make a payment or offer that DCI staff could not make directly.

5.2 Truthful communication

Be accurate about candidates' skills, degrees, experience, certifications, salary expectations, legal work eligibility, availability and conflicts of interest. Do not embellish CVs, conceal disqualifying facts or manufacture references, test results or interview records.

5.3 No fraud or dishonest records

In recruitment, finance and client operations, do not fabricate purchase orders, approvals, attendance, receipts, supplier expenses, invoices, contract dates or payment confirmations. Report suspected irregularities immediately.

WHY IT MATTERS

Singapore's Prevention of Corruption Act covers improper gratification in the public and private sectors. DCI's policy is to prevent even the appearance of an improper commercial inducement.

05 CONFLICTS, GIFTS & FAIR DEALING

Protect independent professional judgment

5.4 Conflicts of interest

Disclose any personal or financial interest that could influence, or appear to influence, decisions regarding candidate selection, placements, client contracts, subcontractors, suppliers, evaluations or invoice approvals.

- Examples include hiring a relative, owning an interest in a proposed supplier, receiving a side commission from a candidate, or negotiating with a client where a close personal relationship exists.
- Do not use DCI or client confidential information for personal investments, private business or another employer.

5.5 Gifts, hospitality and personal benefits

Do not offer or accept cash, cash-equivalent gifts or personal rewards related to business decisions. Modest customary hospitality may be considered only where it is lawful, transparently disclosed, consistent with both DCI and client rules and free from any obligation. Obtain advance approval where required.

Where a client has a stricter no-gifts rule, that rule must be observed at the client site and in dealings with its staff.

5.6 Fair competition and dealings

Deal fairly with competing manpower firms, vendors and customers. Do not collude on bid prices, divide customers or candidates unlawfully, share prohibited pricing information or obtain a competitor’s confidential documents improperly.

5.7 No unauthorised commitments

Only approved DCI personnel may sign client contracts, vary master agreement rates, agree conversion fees, issue binding quotations or approve exceptional commercial terms.

WHAT TO DO

Disclose a potential conflict to DCI before acting; pause your involvement until an authorised manager determines suitable safeguards or reassignment.

05 RESPONSIBLE RECRUITMENT

Staffing integrity, work passes and client requirements

5.8 Merit-based, transparent recruitment

DCI recruitment must be based on verified role requirements, fair consideration and factual assessment. Candidate suitability reports should describe demonstrated evidence, explain material gaps and differentiate technical fit from salary or commercial considerations.

- Seek permission or a valid basis to use candidate information and share it only with intended hiring teams.
- Make job descriptions, duration, location, salary structure and material requirements clear to candidates as early as reasonably possible.
- Do not coach candidates to submit forged credentials, misrepresent work experience or conceal non-compliant arrangements.

5.9 Employment eligibility and work passes

For employees requiring an Employment Pass, S Pass or other authorisation, DCI must verify applicable eligibility and conditions before deployment. Workers must perform only activities, for the employer and in locations or arrangements, permitted by applicable law and pass conditions.

DCI will administer applicable statutory contributions and levies according to employee status and law. Never assume an EP or S Pass holder has the same payroll treatment as an employee eligible for CPF contributions.

5.10 Candidate payments and sourcing ethics

Employees must not demand hidden recruitment charges, salary kickbacks or personal placement fees from candidates. Any recruitment charges permitted by law, if applicable to a regulated activity, must be disclosed and administered through an authorised business process.

5.11 Candidate and client separation

Do not re-use proprietary client tests, confidential interview material or non-public salary schedules to support competing submissions without authorisation.

RECRUITMENT PRINCIPLE

A strong placement is one where the candidate's capabilities, lawful employment conditions and the client's approved needs are accurately represented—not one obtained through manipulated records.

05 ACCURATE BUSINESS RECORDS

Timesheets, invoicing, expenses and audit trails

5.12 Records and financial integrity

DCI will keep complete, timely and accurate records covering employment, client assignments, salaries, approved rates, purchase orders, timesheets, customer invoices, receipts, supplier costs and other transactions. Employees must use approved systems and supporting documents.

- Record only services delivered under an active, authorised contract and the relevant approved purchase order or equivalent instruction.
- Check customer, staff, assignment, billing period, cost allocation and approved rate before finance submission.
- Prevent duplicate charges for the same work or time period. If a manual and automated process appear to overlap, stop and escalate before issuing or recording a second invoice.
- Do not mark an invoice or supplier payment as paid without appropriate bank, payment or reconciliation evidence.

5.13 Approvals and segregation of duties

A person who prepares a quotation or payment request should not bypass required approval steps. Exception handling and corrections must leave an auditable record. No one should instruct colleagues to create artificial evidence solely to satisfy a system check.

5.14 Client deliverables and quality

Work products, assessments, reports, technical changes and billing submissions must be tested or reviewed to the standard agreed for the task. Errors should be corrected promptly with an explanation to the authorised parties where necessary.

DCI OPERATIONAL SAFEGUARD

Approved billing information should flow from verified contracts and attendance records through approved invoicing and reconciliation processes. Client approval and internal approval are not interchangeable.

06 RESPONSIBILITY & COMMUNICATION

Professional conduct beyond the work desk

6.1 Social media, public statements and photography

Do not publish client names, badges, office photos, project details, interviews, personal data, documents or work incidents without authority. Never imply that a personal post is an official statement from DCI or the client.

Only designated personnel may communicate on behalf of DCI to the media or make public announcements regarding customer matters, business performance, alleged incidents or regulatory inquiries.

6.2 Respect for intellectual property

Respect third-party copyrights, software licences, source code, proprietary templates and trade secrets. Material developed for an assignment must be treated under the applicable client and DCI contractual arrangements; do not assume it may be kept, copied or republished.

6.3 Environmental and community responsibility

Use materials, energy and travel resources responsibly. Follow site waste-disposal requirements and avoid unnecessary printing, equipment waste or misuse of hazardous materials. Charitable or sponsorship activities must be transparent and never used to secure improper business advantage.

6.4 Outside interests and political participation

Personal civic and political activities must not be presented as being endorsed by DCI or a client unless formally authorised. Do not use company resources, time or confidential information for those activities. Disclose outside employment or activities that create a conflict or breach contractual obligations.

THINK BEFORE SHARING

Information encountered at a client workplace is not automatically public. If you are unsure about a photo, public post, talk or portfolio entry, obtain written permission first.

07 REPORTING CONCERNS

Speak up early, safely and responsibly

7.1 What should be reported?

Report suspected theft, fraud, bribery, discrimination, harassment, unsafe work, privacy incidents, unauthorised access, falsified timesheets, pay irregularities, work-pass concerns and instructions to break the law or this Code. You do not need to prove a concern before raising it in good faith.

7.2 How to report

Immediate danger	Contact emergency services or the client site emergency response team first; inform DCI as soon as it is safe.
Workplace / client matter	Contact the designated DCI supervisor or HR representative; also use the client incident/reporting channel where required.
Concern about your supervisor	Escalate to another DCI management representative or the designated independent reporting channel.
Cyber or data incident	Notify authorised client IT/security for client systems and DCI management or its security lead promptly.

7.3 Confidentiality, fairness and no retaliation

DCI will handle reports discreetly, share details only with those who need to assess or investigate them and protect personal information consistent with applicable law and fair process. Anonymous reporting may limit our ability to obtain further facts. Retaliation against a person who makes a genuine report or assists an investigation is prohibited.

7.4 Reporting in good faith

Give accurate facts and available evidence. Do not knowingly make false accusations, threaten witnesses, conduct unauthorised searches or delete records. DCI will assess concerns proportionately and refer matters externally where legally required or appropriate.

BEFORE ISSUING THIS CODE

DCI management must confirm and fill in its named reporting recipient, alternative escalation channel, official contact method and handling owner in the administration page.

CLIENT-SITE QUICK GUIDE

Keep this page for daily reference

Before the first day

- Confirm client, authorised role, supervisor and DCI contact.
- Complete access, security, site safety and confidentiality orientation.
- Understand leave, overtime, attendance and reporting arrangements.
- Verify you know whom to contact in an emergency.

Every working day

- Use only approved premises, devices, systems and credentials.
- Record actual hours worked and obtain appropriate approvals.
- Keep client and candidate information off personal email and unapproved tools.
- Act respectfully; raise safety, harassment and security concerns.

Before accepting any unusual request

- Is this within the approved assignment and my competency?
- Is the instruction consistent with law, security rules and pass conditions?
- Does it change pay, overtime, billing, contract terms or access?
- Should DCI approve it before I proceed?

At the end of the assignment

- Complete factual handover and resolve open work records.
- Return client assets and badges; follow access revocation.
- Do not retain confidential work products, CVs or login details.
- Check final attendance and employment administrative steps with DCI.

THE FOUR-STEP RESPONSE

PAUSE if unsafe or unauthorised → PROTECT people and information → REPORT to the right DCI/client contact → RECORD facts and follow instructions.

REAL-WORLD SCENARIOS

How the Code applies in practice — part 1

Scenario A / Uploading customer documents to an AI tool

A deployed engineer wants an instant summary of a client technical report and considers uploading it to a public AI website.

CORRECT RESPONSE / Do not upload it unless the client and DCI permit that specific tool and data class. Use an approved internal solution or request permission.

Scenario B / Client requests unapproved overtime

A client supervisor asks an employee to stay late and says, “We will sort the timesheet out later.”

CORRECT RESPONSE / Clarify DCI and client approval rules before overtime wherever practical. If emergency work is genuinely required, promptly notify DCI and accurately record the facts; never invent approval.

Scenario C / Personal reward for candidate selection

A candidate offers a DCI recruiter money if the recruiter sends the candidate’s profile as the best match, regardless of qualifications.

CORRECT RESPONSE / Refuse the offer, keep appropriate evidence and report it to DCI. Assess all candidates fairly against the authorised role requirements.

Scenario D / Harassment by a client employee

An assigned DCI employee repeatedly receives inappropriate personal messages from someone at the client office and fears losing the assignment if they complain.

CORRECT RESPONSE / Save the messages safely, report promptly through DCI and/or client channels, and request protective measures. No DCI manager may retaliate for a good-faith complaint.

REAL-WORLD SCENARIOS

How the Code applies in practice — part 2

Scenario E / Duplicate customer invoicing

Finance discovers that a manual invoice was already issued for the same approved employee, client and period being prepared in an automated billing flow.

CORRECT RESPONSE / Stop the duplicate transaction. Reconcile the existing invoice and supporting work records; notify the relevant approver and document the resolution. Never create a second invoice to “complete the workflow.”

Scenario F / Work pass and role changes

A client asks an S Pass or EP employee to start work at another entity or in materially different duties without DCI involvement.

CORRECT RESPONSE / Do not assume the change is permitted. Contact DCI immediately for work-pass, contract and assignment verification before accepting the new arrangement.

Scenario G / Client purchase-order information

An employee sees a client’s confidential supplier rates and is asked by another client for a comparison table.

CORRECT RESPONSE / Do not disclose the first client’s confidential rates. Use publicly available or properly authorised information only.

Scenario H / Gifts after invoice approval

A vendor offers vouchers to an employee who can expedite a payment or certify a timesheet.

CORRECT RESPONSE / Decline, disclose the approach and follow DCI’s approvals and reporting arrangements. Do not exchange favours for business decisions.

WHEN UNCERTAIN

Request advice rather than guessing. A transparent pause is better than an unauthorised decision.

✓ ACKNOWLEDGEMENT & CONTROL

For staff issue and management administration

Employee acknowledgement

I acknowledge that I have received and had an opportunity to read the DCI Consultants Code of Business Conduct & Ethics. I understand that it applies to my duties for DCI, including duties performed at client sites or remotely. I agree to follow its requirements, applicable client site policies and lawful instructions, seek clarification when unsure and promptly report genuine concerns.

I understand that this Code operates alongside my employment agreement and applicable legal requirements and does not replace them.
